To stop that first binding spell he had used all the strength.A long shudder went through her as she stood facing him. She felt herself larger than he was, larger than she was, enormously larger. She could reach out one finger and destroy him. He stood there in his small, brave, brief humanity, his mortality, defenseless. She drew a long, long breath. She stepped back from him..A chill ran through her. The water ran cold. Gathering herself together, her limbs still soft and loose, she looked up and saw on the bank above her the black figure of a man..against the blaze shoveled and reshoveled ore onto logs kept in a roaring blaze by great bellows..He left her at the corner of the street, a narrow, dull, somehow sly-looking street that slanted up between featureless walls to a wooden door in a higher wall. He had put his spell on her, and she looked like a man, though she did not feel like one. She and Ivory took each other in their arms, because after all they had been friends, companions, and he had done all this for her. "Courage!" he said, and let her go. She walked up the street and stood before the door. She looked back then, but he was gone..was less to her than the mother she had not known.."Double-hearted? You? You gave up wizardry because you knew that if you didn't, you'd betray it."..Thunder?.His humble teachers had taught him all the words they knew of the Language of the Making.

Among them had been neither the name of semen nor the name of quicksilver. But his lips parted, his tongue moved. "Ayezur" he said. "My name's myself. True. But what's a name, then? It's what another calls me. If there was no other, only me, what would I want a name for?" and in its walls were thin, crimson, crumbling beds of cinnabar... He made no sign. He thought.
